The Ohio LSAMP Alliance 2019 Conference is a two-day retreat-style conference that offers LSAMP Scholars the opportunity to present research, participate in workshops, experience excursions to industries, network, and reinforce their commitment to STEM careers. Faculty and staff will collaborate in workgroup sessions to develop strategies that will bring about institutional change and empower students to achieve their academic, personal, and professional goals.

The purpose of the Louis Stokes Alliances for Minority Participation (LSAMP) program is to increase underrepresented minority recruitment, retention, persistence, and attainment of STEM degrees.

The Ohio LSAMP Alliance is an alliance of 11 institutions of higher education, including six four-year institutions, four community colleges, and one HBCU.

LSAMP is a program of the National Science Foundation.
